. Inside pack 4.3 are: 1) Fixed time displayed for units (1.20/5.00 seconds)2) Fixed Infantry Ladders, Scrap Stone, Plate Armor, 3x2, and how to disarm/enable it3) Fixed a bug where mounted archers would dismount when an enemy unit came into view4) Fixed a bug where Minors or Marines with a Tech 1 weapon would be unable to attack5) A random camera angle to keep you on your toes.6) Fixed clicking a unit menu item when in combat will not cancel the combat. This is not a total conversion, but a small add on to the original game. Your goal is to destroy all human forces in the region, but keep your units intact, and put some distance between you and the enemy. Watch out for the sneaky AI units that can deploy many, or all of your units. A huge difference compared to other AI games is the ability to shoot at the enemy. It is extremely important to get the ability to shoot and block in the game. 1) It is essential to be able to fire with the best weapon/body type. So if you can only use melee weapons, set up a defense line and hope that you can fight your way through to get your melee weapons. If you can fire with all, use that.2) If you are outnumbered, it is very important to have the ability to shoot.3) If you are using a ranged weapon and an enemy is in close range, take him out first. Then you can concentrate on the rest.4) On your turn, the AI will go through the same turn order as you, and once you are attacked, wait until the end of the AI's turn to respond.5) Some units are much more useful than others, so make sure you have the most effective units before you attack. Don't forget to pick up any weapons you might find. The AI will often have a few extra weapons, so when you see a weapon on the ground or a unit has one, make sure to pick it up. They are useful in many situations. The following effects are not implemented, but can be useful in a pinch. Command (3 different options to display) This will make the commander speak in a much more friendly voice. If he is in combat, he will yell at you to continue fighting.
